

Why We All Need a Personal Competitive Advantage (Part 2)

Presented by
MARK C. PERNA

Terms of Use: This activity guide is provided free of charge for public and private use. Posting any part of these materials online or altering them in any way to give away or resell is prohibited. Failure to comply constitutes copyright infringement.

Welcome to the Competitive Advantage Track!

In these highly engaging, plug-and-play videos, your learners will discover the powerful skills to craft a personal competitive advantage—and why they need it.

In a fast-changing world, young people must develop strong life and career skills. Each module (or “Slice”) includes a short, heartfelt talk by Career Tree creator Mark C. Perna about a particular skill, why it matters, and how it connects to their personal competitive advantage for whatever they want to achieve in life.

▶ Click on the video to learn more, or click here:
<https://youtu.be/o8W9X78A2fM>

MARK C. PERNA

“ Building a competitive advantage can help you move forward by getting you the skills needed to do well in life, and whatever you’re passionate about. It gives you purpose and you can get far.

— Student

You can then implement any or all of the resources in this packet:

- Facilitator Reflection
- Group Discussion Starters
- Supersize Suggestions

You choose whatever elements will make the greatest impact in your unique learning environment.

“ I liked that we weren’t pushed to be motivated and inspired, like every other video.

— Student

Strategies for Success

“ You need this because we need this to survive... We will be better than the rest and have a competitive advantage. And since we are learning this now we could have a lead on the others.

— Student

How you use the Competitive Advantage Track is entirely up to you. It can be a bellringer exercise, material for an entire class period, or something you use at home with your child. You can use all the materials in this packet or change them up. These resources are provided to adapt in any way that best serves your schedule and learners.

That said, here are a few best practices to consider:

- Make “competitive advantage” your thread: The experienced facilitators who piloted the Competitive Advantage Track tapped into the power of repetition by constantly touching back on the concept of a personal competitive advantage. Everything the learners did moving forward was done because it related to their own competitive advantage. With this narrative, learners were more engaged when asked to complete work.
- Connect “competitive advantage” with the lifestyle the learner wants to live: For today’s young people, everything—including career—is a lifestyle decision. The kind of life they can live, the things they can afford, and the places they can go are what motivate young people to put in the necessary effort. Building a personal competitive advantage today is what sets you up for the lifestyle you want to enjoy tomorrow.
- Encourage effort: Our pilot facilitators suggest that the concept of a personal competitive advantage is a useful tool to answer questions like “Why do I have to learn this?” or “When will I ever use this?” The answer: “It is all part of building your own personal competitive advantage.” Making “personal competitive advantage” a constant thread throughout the day encourages effort and helps reframe the challenge the learner is experiencing with an end goal that matters to them.
- Where possible, connect to the Career Tree: While the Competitive Advantage Track can be used as a stand-alone lesson, it’s also designed to integrate with the Career Tree career exploration tool. The Competitive Advantage Track helps learners develop their Root System and ultimately move closer to their goal on the Career Tree. Find out more about the Career Tree for classroom use here.

“ It can help me by giving me something to look up to and give me ideas.

— Student

Slice 2:

Why We All Need a Personal Competitive Advantage (Part 2)

Video Runtime: 9:31

Learners will discover:

- Mark's story: how epic failure can be the precursor to success
- How to focus, plan, and take action to overcome challenges and build a competitive advantage
- The Why Generation and why they're capable of amazing things
- How academic knowledge, technical competency, and professional skills together comprise a competitive advantage
- How passion can start with finding what you're good at

▶ Click on the video above to get started, or click here:
<https://youtu.be/TxUbUKOld90>

Visit MarkCPerna.com/cat to access the full, free library of Slices and downloadable activities.

Facilitator Reflection

Reflect on what success looks like for someone working in your field. Consider the ways that a personal competitive advantage can be built out of challenges and what a person would need to do to achieve that. Learners need to know that everyone faces adversity and adapting their approach is vital to succeeding. Their unique competitive advantage will be key in allowing them to make the necessary changes.

Activities: Next Page

Slice 2: Activities

Group Discussion Starters

- How might successful people adapt to challenges or failures?
- How can your personal competitive advantage motivate you when times are tough and things are challenging?
- How do you imagine Mark might have used his personal and professional failures to get better?

Supersize Suggestions

This is just a starter list to help you supersize the impact of this Slice. Customize these activities or create your own to fit your unique learning environment and course of study, if applicable.

- Have learners discuss any obstacles to achieving their goals or objectives.
Ask: How would you use your personal competitive advantage to overcome challenges?
- Encourage learners to visualize something they have struggled with but choose not to give up on.
Ask: What did you have do to overcome, adapt, and try again?
- Have learners think of a question they would like to ask Mark about his story.
Ask: How might he answer if he was there in person?
- As the facilitator, tell a story from your own life about a time you experienced a challenge and how you adapted to it. Share with learners what your biggest takeaway was from that experience.
- Project: Have learners write or orally present a reflection on what they have learned about a personal competitive advantage.
Ask: How will you continue building your personal competitive advantage?

Big-Picture View

This closure question is designed to show learners the relevance of what they're learning to their lifestyle and career goals. They should be able to connect the dots between their unique competitive advantage and what they're learning.

- How will what you're currently learning allow you to supersize your personal competitive advantage?

Discover the Career Tree

Created by education leader Mark C. Perna, the Career Tree is the first career exploration tool informed by a generational perspective. Through meaningful self-discovery, ongoing dialogue, and real-world goal-setting, this groundbreaking approach is helping organizations across North America to enroll, engage, and complete students in higher numbers. Find out more about the Career Tree here.

Within the Career Tree, the Competitive Advantage Track helps young people build a strong foundation to reach their desired career and lifestyle goals. On the TFSCareerTree.com portal, our Career Tree community has access to early releases, curricular elements, and training materials not available to the general public.

You can use the free elements of the Competitive Advantage Track without being part of our Career Tree community, but we encourage you to schedule a demo to explore how the Career Tree can supersize your efforts.

Please note the Career Tree is a classroom tool and is not designed for home use. New resources created especially for parents are in the works, so subscribe to our free Paradigm Shift newsletter to stay posted as those are released.

Mark C. Perna

CREATOR OF THE CAREER TREE & COMPETITIVE ADVANTAGE TRACK

Mark C. Perna is a generational thought leader on a mission to effect a national paradigm shift in education, employment, and economic development. He delivers 80+ keynotes annually across North America, including a special address at Harvard University. At Forbes.com, his weekly column on generational issues in careers, education, and the workforce reaches an audience of more than 4 million. His Perna Syndicate micropodcast is heard in more than 70 countries.

Mark, who serves on the Advisory Council for the Coalition for Career Development in Washington, DC, founded the Education with Purpose & Employment with Passion movement to help communities connect education, business, and economic pipelines. He is a frequent guest on television and podcasts, including the #1 economic development podcast, Develop This!

Mark created the Career Tree and Competitive Advantage Track to empower parents, educators, employers, and community stakeholders to unleash the tremendous potential of today's younger generations. This is also the topic of his bestselling book, Answering Why, which won eight national awards, including the Nautilus Award which is given to books that make a positive difference in the world.

You can contact Mark here and follow his mission on these platforms:

MARK C. PERNA

STAY CONNECTED

Want to stay posted on our latest releases in the Competitive Advantage Track and other free resources? Subscribe to our free Paradigm Shift newsletter now to receive actionable strategies, insights, and tools 2x a month from the desk of education and generational thought leader Mark C. Perna!